Life on the physical plane is frustrating because our biological urges toward bigger-better-faster and our drive to be important create a relentless agitation. We look for relief on the earthly plane, often outside ourselves, but it doesn't work. Backed by a deep understanding of morality and a careful reading by Bill Loran, these words offer possible ways to get beyond the cheap polemics of the Right and Left and to find concrete ways to live the charity toward others that Christ taught. The program also offers help with integrating the differing challenges men and women have in developing soul and moral structure. This is a classy and humble program that thoughtful people of all faiths will find deeply rewarding. T.W.
